Stopping Faculty Burnout

Across HigherEd, faculty are burned out, struggling with complex workloads, losing trust in administrative processes, and feeling disengaged from their roles. But it's more important than ever to focus on faculty retention because of its impact on student retention and engagement, and the current challenges of hiring. The teaching assignment process is a critical piece of re-engaging faculty, re-building trust, and managing workloads. If your institution is still using a manual system for teaching assignments, read more below to learn about the benefits of digitization.

Top Hiring Tip for HigherEd

For higher education institutions, recruiting and hiring can be a complex and challenging process. Attracting top talent in a competitive market requires making the most of recruitment marketing tactics, embracing digitization, and building a thoughtful candidate experience—but it also starts earlier than that. Before a role is posted—and even before a position description is finalized—there is an important step your team should be taking. Hear a top hiring tip from an internal PeopleAdmin expert in our recent blog post.
